

Airport Charges Billing Service

Running an airport is expensive

Your airport is a valuable resource to your community and the aviation industry. But running and maintaining it can be a financial strain.

How Avdata can help you to reduce costs

We can help you to recover some of the costs by collecting a fee from people using your airport.

We can also help to reduce your administration costs by looking after all aspects of billing and collection. You'll quickly cut the costs of your paperwork!

We can take care of details like:

- collecting and processing data about the use of your airport
- calculating the charges
- sending out accounts to aircraft operators
- processing payments
- answering queries from aircraft operators
- keeping records of aircraft liability and ownership
- tracking and recovering debts.

Tailoring charges to your airport

You can charge aircraft operators for the use of your airport in several ways:

- a fee for each landing, based on the maximum take-off weight of the aircraft.
We recommend this type of fee. It's easy for the operator to work out, and it reflects the amount of wear and tear the airport receives. AirServices Australia and many other airport owners work out their fees this way
- a flat fee for each landing.
- fees for parking, pavement concessions, and use of airport facilities.
- an annual fee.

You can decide what charges you want for your airport.

The advantages for airport managers

You receive regular income.

You save on administrative costs, and get rid of overheads that are expensive but often hidden.

You can redirect people and resources to areas where you need them.

You don't have to send out lots of bills for small amounts.

Every month we send you just one cheque.

With your payment, we also provide you with a report detailing the use of your airport in the past month.

The advantages for aircraft operators

Every month, we send aircraft operators just one account, no matter how many airports they use.

Operators only have to make one payment, not one for every airport they visit - a major saving on administration.

The account also lists important administrative data like:

- flight details including the date and time
- charges for each flight
- parking fees
- annual fees
- any other charges.

If you would like to know how much revenue your airport could raise, we can do an evaluation for you. There's no obligation to use our services.

Contact Avdata for further information.